NEW ROOSEVELT BLOW AT WILSON

Navy Sent to Aid Germany Keep U-Boat Promise, Says Colonel

[By Telegraph to The Tribune.]

Oyster Bay, Nov. 6.—Before a gathering of his fellow townsmen and hundreds who motored from all parts of Long Island to hear him, Colonel Roosevelt fired the last salvo of the Republican campaign in the Opera House here to-night. His targets were President Wilson and hyphenism. His address was the result of his custom to give the last night before election to his home and home country. Robert Bacon was in charge of the assemblage.

The Colonel lost no time getting the range of the White House, and punctuated his figures of speech with a familiarity of accent which won much applause.

"At this moment," he began his criticism of the Wilson Administration, "I believe there is no way we can increase the jeopardy of this country and its liability to be warped upon more than by electing Woodrow Wilson. This is so because the great military nations of the earth are making up their minds that they can treat America with contempt as long as Wilson is President.

"If they keep up this practice a point soon will be reached at which the American nation as individuals will rise up and declare war. Mr. Wilson has followed a most dangerous course, submitting to wrongs from everybody instead of doing right by exacting justice from everybody."

Says Wilson Aided U-53

The Colonel next turned his attention to the operations of the German submarine U-53 off the American coast, and pointed to that affair as an example of Administration "spinelessness."

"I have just read that an American ship was torpedoed off Wales and sunk. Only last week another ship was torpedoed and five American lives lost. I think Mr. Wilson wrote his usual note concerning it, with the usual contempt of his notes received."

"Only several weeks ago a German military submarine came here, entered our port and notified our government it proposed to go outside the three-mile limit and sink certain ships. Now, Mr. Wilson claimed great credit last spring on the grounds of German promises to him that no ships should be sunk in a way putting the non-combatants aboard in jeopardy."

"When the German submarine over here notified our State Department of its intentions, our government sent American warships out with it to take care of the non-combatants; in other words, we sent our ships out to help them to get around the promise of safety to non-combatants and dodge the issue. Such an action not only gains contempt for the United States, but blemishes it."

Wilson's Stand a "Mistake"

"There are only two defensible courses to take in regard to foreign relations," continued Colonel Roosevelt. "Either one must take the stand of absolute neutrality and refuse to deal with other nations, or to take the stand which we will do no wrong to another nation, and within limits, will exercise pressure upon behalf of weak nations. The latter is my stand. Mr. Wilson's stand, which is not in any way defensible, is a mistle of the worse—in my position with the deeds of the former position of weak neutrality."

The speaker next criticized the administration's Mexican policy. He told of the outrages committed there and thrilled his hearers with the story of American soldiers, whose ears were cut off while they were alive, and whose heads were cut off after they had been returned to death so that they could be shown through the Mexican village as proof of an American defeat.

"If Mr. Wilson didn't mean to see the Pershing expedition through he should not have started it. It was infamous to send them in and then keep them from finishing the job."

"A man of Leonard Wood's calibre should be put in there, with orders to secure order and peace. It is my belief that if the American troops had been properly backed up they would have been less bloodshed than there has been since then. Eighty per cent of the personnel of the various bandit armies would have shown up as workmen for the mines of Northern Mexico as soon as they saw a chance to get food, work, shelter and protection."

Concerning the Democratic slogan, "Wilson kept us out of war," Colonel Roosevelt told of how he was confronted by Germany, backed by Great Britain, in the Venezuelan controversy when he was President.

"I had a fair chance of getting embroiled with those two nations at a time when they were not tied up with other matters. I should have followed the course I took even had it led to war with those countries, because I believe it was the only upright course to take."

Colonel Roosevelt concluded his talk with denunciations of Secretary of War Baker for voicing comparisons between the men of '76 and Villa's soldiers.

"Such statements as these," he said, "give justification to men of foreign birth who prefer to claim allegiance to some other country than the one in which they are disloyal among our citizens when the men who should be our leaders make such unpatriotic utterances."

WILSON HOPEFUL OF VINDICATION

But Strain Shows in Spite of Assurances from Managers

[From a Staff Correspondent of The Tribune.]

Long Branch, N. J., Nov. 6.—Shadow Lawn tonight is tense with expectancy of to-morrow's result. Although President Wilson is still confident of "vindication by the great American jury," as he puts it, the strain of the remaining hours has begun to tell upon him. Despite the assurances of his managers that there is to be a Democratic "landslide," the President realizes the closeness of the contest and is anxious.

All day to-day the President was in touch with Secretary Tumulty, either over the wire to the executive offices or in personal consultation. With unusual care he went over the telegrams that continue to pour in from all parts of the country predicting his "victory," while he showed the greatest interest in the reports of political conditions. Reassuring as these were, both the President and Secretary Tumulty realized that still there might somewhere be a slip-up among the prophets.

Will Vote in Princeton

Early to-morrow the President and Mrs. Wilson will motor to Princeton, where the President will cast his vote. The rest of the day he plans to spend quietly at Shadow Lawn, where, surrounded by members of his family and relatives, he will receive the returns. A special wire from the source of the at Shadow Park has been installed, which will relay the returns as they come from Democratic headquarters in New York.

The summer White House offices were almost empty to-day owing to the absence of clerks and stenographers returning to their homes to aid the Wilson cause by their votes. Secretary Tumulty will go to Jersey City early in the morning. The on-line has been the campaign move to heart than the President's chief assistant, who has suffered and exulted as political temperatures have varied from "warm" to "chilly." And to-night he is worried by the fact that, notwithstanding straw ballots and McCormick predictions, bettings odds continue in Hughes's favor.

Will Return This Week

No plans have been considered by the President for the contingency of his defeat. He has refused to entertain the suggestion of a programme call for the removal of the executive offices and his return to Washington at the end of this week.

President Wilson was asked to-day to include in his Thanksgiving proclamation an appeal to the people of the United States to aid European war sufferers. The request was made by Ignace Paderewski and a delegation representing organizations interested in relief work. The committee left under the impression that their request would be granted.

Charles S. MacFarland, general secretary of the Federal Council of Churches of Christ in America, and Mr. Paderewski also presented a memorial urging the President to contribute his efforts to relieve suffering in Poland. The memorial was signed by Cardinal Ruffini and Ralph Joseph Silverman, of New York, and other men representing the Protestant, Roman Catholic and Jewish faiths.

THEATRE CROWD CHEERS HUGHES

Ovation at "Major Pen-dennis" Lasts Ten Minutes

Just about the time the Hon. John J. Voter turns over, yawning, for his last snooze this morning Charles E. Hughes, Republican candidate for President, will be dropping ballot No. 30-and-so in the ballot box in a laundry shop on Eighth Avenue, south of Forty-fifth Street. It will be about 7 a. m. Mr. Hughes always votes before breakfast. That is a habit he contracted from his father, and he has no notion of shaking it off this time.

Yesterday was a quiet, pleasant day for both Mr. and Mrs. Hughes. Mr. Hughes looked over his wardrobe in the morning and discovered that enthusiastic Republicans in various parts of the United States had pulled some stitches here and there in his clothes, trying to shake hands. When he had attended to that, he took a walk up Fifth Avenue to Central Park and back. Then and later in the afternoon, when he and Mrs. Hughes motored over Riverside Drive to Dyckman Street, he was immensely pleased to see that nearly every one recognized him with friendly cordiality, so that he was kept busy bowing.

Visits Headquarters

At noon he and Mrs. Hughes unexpectedly visited national headquarters. National committee workers scurrying about in their shirt sleeves were somewhat embarrassed, but both Mr. and Mrs. Hughes had a good time. Chairman Wilcox escorted them through all the departments, introduced them to the workers and showed them some of the details of how it all was done. They met with "three cheers for our next President" wherever they went. Mrs. Hughes expressed gratification to every one and took particular interest in the women members of the chairman's staff.

Mr. and Mrs. Hughes went to the theatre last night for the first time in many months. They saw John Drew in "Major Pen-dennis" at the Criterion.

Ovation in Theatre

When the Hughes party entered its box there was an instant of neck craning and whispering in the house. Then the applause broke loose. Men and women climbed to seats to get a better view and stood there cheering.

The Presidential candidate stepped to the front of the box and bowed. The cheering and applause did not cease. Mr. Hughes again rose and bowed, acknowledging the incredible feat of in-coming the noise. For ten minutes the ovation persisted, dying away only when it was evident that Mr. Hughes preferred to see the play.

Mr. and Mrs. Hughes reached the Hotel Astor shortly after 11 o'clock and were greeted enthusiastically by about one hundred persons who were filled the lobby. Applause and cheering followed as they made their way to an elevator, and continued until the car had carried them out of sight.

It has been truthfully stated recently that Mr. Hughes is confident that in less than twenty-four hours from now he will be "our next President." Mr. Hughes received many, many telegrams from all parts of the country yesterday reassuring him. The telegrams came from political friends and others, and in some cases from sections, and they were, of course, particularly gratifying to the Republican nominee. They did not arrive in quick succession, but they were put in his pocket on an even more reasonable basis than his own belief.

Has Appeared as a Worker

If Mr. Hughes is not elected to-day he will be, perhaps, the most surprised man in forty-eight states. He has no delusions about the campaign. He has made it his business to be sufficiently well known to the American people to insure their confidence. He has not been about the country slapping people on the back and asking them to vote for him as a good fellow. No; he takes the attitude that he has given the people a clear choice of the kind of Executive he would make, and if they want that kind they can have him.

He will vote early to avoid the rush. He does not mind standing in line awaiting his turn to vote, but he does not want to wait until there is a line, because somebody might keep the line waiting until after he votes. Then he and Mrs. Hughes will take breakfast together at the Hotel Astor, and perhaps motor for an hour or two. He has no plans for the afternoon, except to remain in the city, and to see the family reunion in the Hughes apartment at the hotel.

Will Wait with Family

Nobody will be with Mr. Hughes to-night except his family. Mrs. Hughes, their three daughters, Mr. and Mrs. Charles E. Hughes, Jr., and their children will receive the returns together. Chairman William R. Wilcox will remain at national headquarters most of the evening. Two special wires were rigged up yesterday for the candidate's use. Except to those who have business there, the eighth floor of the hotel will be barred to visitors.

Mr. Hughes's plans for to-morrow and thereafter have not been determined. Whatever the outcome—and Mr. Hughes feels that it will be a victory for the Republican party—he and Mrs. Hughes will remain in New York only for a few days. Present intentions are to take a long rest, probably six weeks, and perhaps in the South. If Mr. Hughes is elected he will retire temporarily from public notice and public utterance for that period.

If to-morrow morning Mr. Hughes is entitled to be called "our next President" he will not talk politics with any one until he and Mrs. Hughes take their intended rest. Potential Cabinet ministers and probabilities for lesser positions under a Hughes regime will not be discussed for several weeks, at least. Mr. Wilson will be free to go his way without any criticism of any kind from his successor.

HUGHES IS SAFE, LEADERS INSIST

Last Minute Reports Show That He Is Still Gaining

As sure as the sun rises this morning Charles E. Hughes will be elected President of the United States, according to Chairman William R. Wilcox and other members of the Republican National Committee. Absolute confidence in a Hughes victory radiated from every nook and corner of Republican national headquarters yesterday. Chairman Wilcox fairly beamed with delight when reading the last-minute telegrams from Republican leaders all over the country. He issued this statement:

"On this closing day of the campaign I confidently state that the battle has been won for Hughes and Fairbanks, who will be elected by a majority of not less than 100 in the Electoral College."

"The American people are not to be deceived by specious explanations as to the failure of the present Administration, nor are they to be cajoled by the promises of those who have failed so lamentably during the last three years. In these closing days of the campaign efforts have been made to enter the minds of the Democratic managers to array one class of our people against other classes, but this will fail, as such appeals always have failed in this country. We have made our appeal not upon racial or religious lines, but solely to the good sense and patriotism of the American people."

In "Desperate Condition"

"The desperate condition into which the campaign of our opponents has fallen is shown by their continued publication of statements known by them to be false, and by their continued striving to incense one part of our people against another part."

"Their efforts to deliver the vote of the laboring men of this country by giving a morsel of pottage to a comparatively few men has failed in its design. Our people will resent the attempt on the part of a few self-confident leaders to enter in a legislative bargain with the Administration for the delivery of votes."

"The voters of this country can be relied upon to render proper judgment upon the methods to which our opponents have resorted. This will be demonstrated by the overwhelming character of the defeat that will be the fate of the Administration at the polls in the election to-morrow."

Expect Heavy Vote

With fair weather predicted for Election Day for the greater part of the country, a condition which proverbially favors the G. O. P., the Republicans are looking forward to an unusually large vote. According to a member of the Republican National Committee, the latest reports from Ohio yesterday were "astonishingly encouraging." The National Hughes Alliance received detailed reports from its branches in Wisconsin and Michigan, which it was announced, placed both those states safely in the Republican column. The reports showed that the situation in those states had changed materially in the last two or three weeks. The Hughes pluralities in Wisconsin and Michigan were estimated by the alliance at 47,000 and 30,000, respectively.

No one could be found at Republican national headquarters yesterday who would express the least doubt of Hughes carrying New York State by a large majority. The political analysts were on hand, however, and some of them who have been studying the national situation from the start of the campaign were inclined to believe that the result of the election would be close. Giving New York State to Hughes, they pointed out that he would be a sure winner if he carried two of the Middle West States of Michigan, Indiana, Illinois, Wisconsin and Ohio—provided one of the two states carried was either Ohio or Illinois.

Hitchcock Confident

Frank H. Hitchcock, of the Republican National Campaign Committee, will arrive here to-day from Chicago. Mr. Hitchcock sent word to Chairman Wilcox yesterday that he was absolutely sure that Mr. Hughes would be elected. He said he stood by his previous prediction that the Republican candidate would receive 308 electoral votes, 298 being necessary for a choice. George W. Perkins, of the Republican National Committee, went out to Oyster Bay yesterday to see Colonel Roosevelt's secretary, declared that while the Colonel felt confident that Hughes would win, he believed the result would be close.

Chairman Wilcox and members of the national campaign committee will receive the returns to-night at national headquarters, 511 Fifth Avenue. The partitions were taken down yesterday in the rooms adjoining the chairman's office and a large blackboard erected at the side of the room, on which the returns will be written as they are received over private wires. Some of the large contributors to the Republican campaign fund have been invited to get the returns at headquarters, and accommodations have been provided for about 125 guests.

Woman's part in the Presidential election is one of the outstanding features. In a quarter of the forty-eight states women have the vote this year. The twelve states are Wyoming, Colorado, Utah, Idaho, Washington, California, Arizona, Kansas, Oregon, Nevada, Montana and Illinois. The women in the last named six states have the vote for President this year for the first time. The interest political leaders take in this vote can be appreciated when it is seen that the states involved have ninety-one electoral votes—a little more than one-sixth of the total.

One woman, Miss Jeannette Rankin, of Montana, is running for Congress on the Republican ticket, and in California Mrs. Josephine Fernald, of San Francisco, is an aspirant for a seat in Congress as a Democrat. If they are elected they will be the first women to win seats in the National House of Representatives. The Progressives of the 1st Colorado Congressional District also nominated a woman, Hattie K. Howard, but she has withdrawn.

WILL VOTE IN ARMORIES

Instructions Issued for Lately Returned Militiamen

Instructions regarding the voting of National Guardsmen who were unable to register because of their service at the border were made public yesterday by Deputy Attorney General Oliver Meier. He announced a list of polling places where the men might vote, their complete units to cast their ballots in their own armories. Members of regiments still at the border who are home on furlough or sick leave may vote at any of these armories.

The armory polling places and hours are: 224 Engineers' Armory, 16th Street and Fort Washington Avenue, 11 a. m. to 5 p. m.; 226 Regiment Armory, for the 4th Field Hospital Corps, 11 a. m. to 3 p. m.; 1st Field Artillery Armory, Sixty-eighth Street and Broadway, 7 a. m. to noon; 1st Field Hospital Armory, 56 West Sixty-sixth Street, 11 a. m. to 3 p. m.

Fourteen thousand members of the Guard are on the border to-day. Francis M. Hugo, Secretary of State, has seen to it that all of them can vote. Henry C. Adams is at McAllen with a carload of ballots and ballot boxes and will have charge of the voting there. There may be no doubt how to mark the ballots, which are a trifle more than eight feet in length.

U. S. CLERKS WIN—BUT LOSE

Get Saturday Half Holiday, with Longer Working Hours

[From The Tribune Bureau.]

Washington, Nov. 6.—Washington's 40,000 government clerks were dismayed at learning to-day that President Wilson's year-round Saturday half holiday had a string to it. Heads of several departments announced that, in compensation for the half holiday, the daily working time henceforth would be an hour longer. For three and a half hours off on Saturdays the employees will work five hours more the rest of the week.

The offices will open at 8:30 and close at 4:30, instead of opening at 9 and closing at 4:30, as in the past.

The employees were jubilant a week ago when they were told that all the cabinet officers had approved the half holiday plan and that President Wilson would follow their recommendation.

EDISON "NOT SO SURE" OF WILSON ELECTION

Inventor Hopes, if President Wins, He Will Increase Defence

"Wilson ought to be elected," said Thomas A. Edison yesterday at his home in West Orange, N. J., "but it is not so sure that he will be."

The inventor said that he hoped if the President were re-elected he would do more than he had already done to put the nation in shape to resist attack. Recently, Mr. Edison said, he had had opportunity to inspect the defences of the country and they were "absurd."

FOUR MEETINGS CLOSE WHITMAN'S CAMPAIGN

"Perfect, but Strenuous," Says Governor, Predicting Re-election

"Well, this is the end of a perfect, if strenuous, campaign," said Governor Whitman as he finished his last speech of the night at the Palace Theatre, 136th Street, near Fifth Avenue. "And if larger crowds and more enthusiastic audiences than that which greeted me two years ago mean anything I will poll a bigger plurality than I did when elected Governor."

The Governor spoke at four meetings last night, repeating at all but one the arguments he has used in his tour of the state. The exception was in Carnegie Hall, where he addressed a gathering of the members of the Swedish Lutheran churches who were holding their annual festival. His speech there was entirely devoid of politics, but the applause was just as enthusiastic as he received at any political rally.

ROCKLAND LAKE'S FATE TIED UP IN BALLOT BOX

Passage of Bond Issue Means Abandonment of Village

To be or not to be—that is the question for the village of Rockland Lake, near Haverstraw, which will be settled at to-day's election.

The one thousand inhabitants of Rockland Lake depend entirely on the neighboring trap rock quarries for a livelihood. If the referendum proposition for a $100,000 bond issue to increase the state forest lands is passed it will mean the territory about Rockland Lake, including the quarries, will become state property and the village will have to be abandoned. The Rockland Lake residents have made a vigorous campaign against the proposition.

HONEST BALLOT GUARD TO WATCH POLLS TO-DAY

Army of 3,000 Volunteers Will Be on Duty

The Honest Ballot Association, wholly non-partisan in its desire for a clean election, will provide watchers to-day in all the turbulent election districts of the city. This army of watchers will be larger than any other in the history of the city, and it is the history of the municipal election of 1913.

Young college men, young lawyers and the employees of downtown trust companies form the material from which most of these watchers will be drawn. A large number are on the payroll of the association; as many more are volunteers. The association has been conducting a series of meetings at the Twenty-third Street Y. M. C. A., at which its officers have been instructing in their duties all those members of the Hughes and Wilson College Men's leagues who wished to volunteer for service on Election Day.

The last meeting was held last night, resulting in a total enrolment of between 300 and 500.

James Byrne is president of the association. Charles E. Hughes, Jr., is vice-president, and ex-Senate Senator George B. Agnew is treasurer. The honorary vice-presidents include Vincent Astor, R. Fulton Cutting, Cleveland M. Dodge, W. Averill Harriman, Frank A. Munsey, George W. Perkins and Talbot Williams.

WILL HEAR ELECTION CASES

Supreme Court Justices Ready to Act on Complaints To-day

The Appellate Division made yesterday its assignments of justices of the Supreme Court to sit on election cases to-day. Justices Weeks, Philbin and Finch will sit in the County Court-house in Chambers Street, and the following special terms will be held at the homes of the justices designated: Justice Lehman, 27 West Sixty-ninth Street; Justice Platzer, 15 East Forty-eighth Street, and Justice Ford the Belmont, Broadway and Eighty-sixth Street. Justices Tierney and Giegerich will hold court in the Bronx County Courthouse.

Either of the justices assigned for duty to-day will hear the complaint of any voter who thinks that he has been unlawfully deprived of the right to vote, and where such complaints are sustained the court will issue a writ of mandamus directing the election board to take his vote.
